VACCINATION IN ENGLAND

A Measure With a "Conscience Clause" Excites Doctors.

MEDICAL COLLEGES PROTEST

The Proposed Law Allows Parents to Object to the Treatment of Children—Physicians Declare the Country Is Menaced by a Smallpox Epidemic—Objects of the Bill.

Paris, Aug. 15.—The European edition of the Herald publishes the following London date:
The anti-vaccinationists in England have, in a measure, gained a triumph because the vaccination bill, conscience clause and all, has got through the third reading in the House of Commons, notwithstanding that it was once rejected by the Lords.

For a considerable time this conscience clause, which runs as follows: "That no parent or other person shall be liable to any penalty under the vaccination act of 1867 if he satisfies justices in petty sessions that he conscientiously believes vaccination would be prejudicial to the health of the child," created no end of controversy, chiefly among the medical profession, and that even the Royal College of Physicians departed from its usual attitude of dignified silence and not to discuss the vaccination bill with particular reference to the conscience clause may be taken as evidence in itself that the clause was looked upon as a very serious matter, and that it was calculated to interfere with that system of compulsory vaccination which medical evidence and health statistics from all parts of the world have so conclusively proved to be a necessary and effective means of preventing the spread of smallpox.

No better example, leading physicians point out, can be taken than the case of India. Not many years ago the country was terribly ravaged with smallpox, but since the enforcement of vaccination, the disease has been gradually stamped out.

There is, no doubt, much to be said in favor of the bill. There has been no objection raised to such clauses as to postpone the date of the vaccination of infants, those providing for the treatment being carried out at home, supplying calf lymph and taking advantage of Dr. Copeland's valuable discoveries regarding the special security afforded by glycerinated lymph, but this conscience clause seems to the minds of many strong advocates of vaccination to upset all that is good in the bill, and to create a very grave danger.

It was pointed out in the debates in the House of Commons that the retention of the conscience clause would be putting a powerful weapon into the hands of the anti-vaccinationists. It is contended that if a conscientious objection were permitted those who were working the agitation against vaccination would make use of the bill as a means of enabling them to avoid vaccinating their children.

To local authorities really is due the bringing in of this bill at all. It was because a large number of these local authorities positively and absolutely declined to enforce the law as it stood that the new bill was introduced.

The object of the bill, or rather of this particular clause, was to get more people to consent to vaccination. Some of the objectors to the bill, however, were one which would not be driven along any direct path, but give them a rope and they might be led.

Medical London as represented by the two royal colleges, has protested in no uncertain voice against the measure, and now that its passing has been disregarded they are angry and indignant. The doctors say sarcastically that smallpox in the future will be in the care of politicians and their amateur friends who have usurped the functions of the medical profession. They charge the government with weakness in yielding to what they term flabby sentimentalism, and they predict that Parliament will only learn wisdom in the matter of vaccination through the horrors of a smallpox epidemic.

Some prominent London physicians are impressed with the responsibility of the matter, and feel that further statements from the profession will arouse the sentiment of the country, which, they say, was rather indifferent to the vaccination bill when it was before Parliament. Doubtless there are many other leading practitioners at present on their holidays who will aid in the agitation in the autumn.

The matter of vaccination is sufficient to present the views of representative gentlemen who have not yet gone out of town.

UNKNOWN MAN MURDERED.

The Victim Supposed to Be Fred W. Wood, of Baltimore.
New York, Aug. 15.—A pistol shot over the left eye tells a mute tale of the murder of an unknown man near Waverly, N. J.

Today the authorities are on a hot hunt for the murderer. The gangs of tramps that infest the neighborhood of Waverly will be rounded up in the hope that among them will be found the murderer. The murdered man was about twenty-five years of age and well dressed. A clew to his identity was discovered. Near the body was a pawn ticket, evidently won by the man who had been found. It was for a watch which had been pawned in Baltimore. On it was the name of Fred W. Wood, East Baltimore Street, Baltimore, Md. The body was found just before midnight last night by trainmen. The corpse was still warm, showing that the man had been alive up to a short time before.

The man had evidently made a fight for his life, as his right eye was blackened and his clothing torn. Powder marks on the face show that the pistol had been held close, so that death would be certain.

MARY LEITER AS A QUEEN.

She Will Rule as Vice Empress in India's Courts.

The first American woman to become a real queen is the daughter of a former dry goods clerk. She will rule more than 300,000,000 people. She will occupy an official position higher than any woman of this nation has ever attained, having mounted to it on a foundation of dry goods and Chicago real estate, but she is worthy of it.

George Nathaniel Curzon, who married Miss Mary Leiter, of Chicago, Ill., has been made viceroy of India, the highest administrative office in the gift of the British crown. There he will be the vice king, and his wife will be the vice queen.

This American woman will act for Queen Victoria and will sit on a throne, and none will be too great to bow before her. She is thirty-one, has $3,000,000 a dowry, and her position is secured for all time. In England she is upon the highest pinnacle.

Thirty years ago the father of this American queen was selling calico and stockings over a counter in Chicago. When he gained wealth his wife fought hard for social recognition, and succeeded. Her daughter can make Mrs. Potter Palmer, her mother, feel that she is a social enemy, knock in vain at the portal of European courts, even after having conquered the Four Hundred and Newport. Mrs. Curzon will sit on a throne in India. There and at Simla the political-social life in India will revolve about her.

Levi Leiter was first employed as a clerk in a dry goods store. He went to Columbus, Ohio, where he sold calico and ribbons. He was little more than a peddler. From there he traveled to Chicago, and in 1854 he entered the dry goods house of Colver, W. & Co.

After a time the firm was reorganized, and Marshall Field became partner. In 1863 the firm of Field, Palmer and Leiter was organized. Wealth rolled in. It is not on record that Levi Leiter was so dally ambitious, but his wife was. She made assault after assault upon the exclusive fastidiousness of Chicago society, and was forced to leave the city and sought refuge in the country. She then decided to come to Washington. The Leiters first lived in the old Blaine mansion, and afterward built a magnificent house on Dumbarton Circle. It is one of the show places of the Capital.

Meanwhile the children were being educated. Miss Mary Leiter and her sister were not projected into the world as heiresses, and then polished off in a finishing school, where young women are taught how to enter and leave a drawing-room, and to make the conversation in a perfectly polite way. The older daughter studied seriously. She was sent abroad to complete her schooling.

Then it was said long before her marriage that Miss Mary Leiter was determined to marry a foreigner, and it was added that he must have a title. The result was shown that she did not want a title as much as she wanted power. And her training has demonstrated that she appreciated the advantages of a well-trained mind.

The Leiter family has much time abroad. Miss Mary Leiter took advantage of her opportunities. She became proficient in the Continental languages. The friends of her father, Mr. Leiter, were in the habit of saying that if a conscientious objection were permitted those who were working the agitation against vaccination would make use of the bill as a means of enabling them to avoid vaccinating their children.

To local authorities really is due the bringing in of this bill at all. It was because a large number of these local authorities positively and absolutely declined to enforce the law as it stood that the new bill was introduced.

The object of the bill, or rather of this particular clause, was to get more people to consent to vaccination. Some of the objectors to the bill, however, were one which would not be driven along any direct path, but give them a rope and they might be led.

TAILORS PREPARE TO STRIKE.

Pressers and Finishers Organize a Fight for Higher Wages.

New York, Aug. 15.—The Pressers and Finishers' branches of the Brotherhood of Tailors are prepared to go on strike against starvation wages. There are about 3,000 workers in the two branches. They held a mass meeting in Wallhalla Hall on Saturday night to vote on a strike. Joseph Barondess and other experienced leaders dissuaded them from striking until they should be better organized. Mass meetings to organize the workers will be held this week, and the strike, it is expected, will be ordered the latter end of the week.

It is believed that the pressers and finishers will be followed in striking by the other branches, until the 12,000 members of the Brotherhood are involved. The striking children's jacket makers and knee pants makers reported yesterday that several contractors had granted their demands.

GERMAN SONG AND STORY

Singing Societies of Th'ee Cities at Bay Ridge.

WASHINGTON BUNDS PRESENT

An Ideal Day and a Grand Musical Festival—Sole and Chorus by Well-Known Vocalists—Old Glory and the Flag of Germany Inter-twined.

Annapolis, Aug. 15.—German songs and true German waiting pleasures reigned supreme in the grove of Bay Ridge, near this ancient capital, yesterday, where the United Singers of Baltimore and visiting societies from Philadelphia and Washington joined in the most successful sangfester ever held in Maryland, under the auspices of local organizations.

One hundred and fifty cars of the Baltimore, Annapolis and Washington Railroad and Annapolis Short Line hauled the great throng to the resort. A conservative estimate placed the number of visitors at 10,000. Every car was crowded, and many were glad to get even standing room, going or coming. Notwithstanding the great crowd that had to be handled, everything went well. Not a single unpleasant or disorderly incident occurred during the day. It was a great day for the German-Americans in every respect, and the unanimous verdict was that the United Singers had covered themselves with glory in the first great outing given under their auspices.

The day, which broke with great black clouds on the horizon, cleared up in the afternoon and the threatened rain did not fall. It was an ideal day at Bay Ridge. A stiff breeze stirred the trees and made the waves roll, but did not blow hard enough to make it chilly or unpleasant. In the groves the various singing societies were seated, their quarters being marked by distinctive scrolls and banners. Each society had its own refreshment booth. Besides these refreshment booths, the various societies, there were many others, and all did a thriving business.

The first train left Baltimore for Bay Ridge at 7:45 a. m. It consisted of fifteen cars and was well filled. Fifty-eight carloads of people were hauled from Washington, twenty from Philadelphia and sixty-nine from Baltimore. Soon after the noon hour the singing by the societies began. By way of introduction Prof. L. Winter's orchestra played a selection which wound up with "The Watch of the United States." President Frank Fall, of the United States Societies of Baltimore, more, brown and sunburned after a journey at Atlantic City, rose and delivered an address of welcome to the societies. He congratulated them on the magnificent showing they made at their first united celebration, and said that the success attending the sangfester spoke a great future for the United Singers of Baltimore.

With this introduction the singing societies began their program, opening with a grand chorus, "Das Kirchlein," was directed by J. C. Frank. Then followed "Der Sanger durch den Wald" and the chorus, "Das Deutsche Lied," by Kalliwad. Mr. Ernest C. Stahl, of Trenton, N. J., delivered an oration, and choruses were sung by the Thalia Maennerchor, Director H. Kraeppe; Lord Baltimore Maennerchor, Director H. Kraeppe; Liebfrauen, Director A. Weber; Sanger Gossengrein, Director Carls; Mozart Maennerchor, Director G. G. Melmet; Frohsinn, H. Kraeppe.

After this part of the program F. H. Weber sang a solo, and Becker's vocal chorus, "Das Kirchlein," was directed by J. C. Frank. Then followed "Der Sanger durch den Wald" and the chorus, "Das Deutsche Lied," by Kalliwad. Mr. Ernest C. Stahl, of Trenton, N. J., delivered an oration, and choruses were sung by the Thalia Maennerchor, Director H. Kraeppe; Lord Baltimore Maennerchor, Director H. Kraeppe; Liebfrauen, Director A. Weber; Sanger Gossengrein, Director Carls; Mozart Maennerchor, Director G. G. Melmet; Frohsinn, H. Kraeppe.

The fine work of each of the societies and the satisfaction they gave to their various adherents in the rendition of their songs caused a friendly rivalry, but the best of good fellowship prevailed. At the time of the rendition of music and the decorations of the booths, completed under the direction of George Gelwits, showed up to advantage. The display of flags and bunting was profuse, the Stars and Stripes and the German flag being festooned over the quarters of each society.

The out-of-town societies represented were: Saengerbund, Arion, and Germania Maennerchor, of Washington; Concordia, of Trenton; Director H. Kraeppe, of Philadelphia. The address of the orator of the day, Mr. Stahl, was a fine effort, and created much enthusiasm. He spoke of Germany as five thousand years old, and said that song would forever be dear to the German heart.

IN MEMORY OF WOLFE TONE.

Founded by a Monument Celebration of the Irishman.
Dublin, Aug. 15.—An immense concourse of people assembled in Dublin today to take part in the ceremonies attending the foundation of a memorial monument to Wolfe Tone, the Irish revolutionist, in commemoration of his patriotic services in the rebellion of 1798.

An immense procession, headed by the lord mayor and sheriff, and including delegates from every part of Ireland and many foreign delegates, including the pope, marched to St. Stephen's Green, where the foundation stone of the memorial was laid. Speeches were made by John Dillon, M. P.; John E. Redmond, M. P., and others.

Heavy Rain in Virginia.
Roanoke, Va., Aug. 15.—An exceedingly heavy rainstorm visited this neighborhood yesterday, doing considerable damage to crops and other property. The Norfolk and Western Railroad and Roanoke-Salem Electric Railway bridges were swept away. The former, which is 100 feet long, was carried some distance and lodged against a tree. A freight train, in charge of Engineer C. E. Kirkwood, was not warned of the danger and ran into the stream. Five cars piled on top of the locomotive, which blocked the stream. Luckily, no one was seriously hurt.

Exercises at Morgantown.
Morgantown, W. Va., Aug. 15.—The first half of the summer quarter at the university came to a close yesterday. Dr. Lester F. Ward, of the Smithsonian Institution at Washington, gave his concluding lecture in the course on sociology. After he had finished speaking Dr. Ward was presented with a written testimonial, signed by every member of the class, of their appreciation of his work. The testimonial was intended as a vindication of the recent false charges made by the press concerning Dr. Ward and his theories. The statements, at the time of their appearance, created a sensation.

A Mexican War Veteran Ill.

$1 and $1.25 Imperfect Wrappers, 49c.

Right in line with our special wrapper offerings of last week we put on sale a lot of slightly imperfect and slightly soiled wrappers—secured direct from the factory. The lot consists of all those wrappers which became soiled in making, and all those which were left unfinished by mistake, but which were prevented leaving the establishment by vigilant inspectors. The lot consists of fine percales, fine lawns and batistes. In many instances an oil spot prevented the sale of it at regular prices, and in other instances some are slightly ripped or the collar or hem at the bottom of the skirt is unfinished. A minute's work will make them as good as new. It would pay you to fix them up when it wouldn't pay the maker to lose the time. Some are handsomely trimmed with fancy India linen and some are trimmed with braid and Hamburg embroidery ruffle. Most of them have wide ruffles of same over shoulder. They were made to sell for $1 and $1.25, and they didn't for the reason above stated. Choice 49c.

Last of the 25c ribbons at 12½c.

It has been a great sale. They've been odd pieces and short lengths, but you have gotten immense value for your money. Tomorrow will see the last of this great ribbon offering. There are hundreds of pieces, but it won't take but a day to clean them out completely. Every yard is pure silk, and in the lot are fine plain and fancy taffetas in all colors, which no other store would dare to sell for 12½c a yard.

Any high-grade shirt waist for 69c.

And this includes everything in the house save the plain white and plain black India linens. In the lot are included the finest gingham, madras and lawns and fine French percales; they are all made with stylish blouse effects and new yokes. Some of them sold for as high as $2.50, and selling them for 69c means an immense loss, which is ours, and by which you benefit.

$1 shirt waists, 29c.

Hundreds of fine French percales and lawn shirt waists, in a variety of the most fashionable colorings and patterns, which sold for as high as $1 first of the season, now go on a table at 29c. This is by far greater value than other offers you, for where the price is lower than this you get last season's styles.

DEATH OF AN ECCENTRIC MAN.

Barred in a Coffin He Had Long Kept Wall'd.
Parkersburg, W. Va., Aug. 15.—George Fetter, sr., who died recently at Adonia, near Sistersville, was a very peculiar man, and an incident in his life is just now revived. Twenty years ago a cabinet maker owed the man an account which he was slow in settling. In fact, the man could not pay Fetter, seeing no other way to secure the bill, he had the cabinetmaker construct a coffin for him, and during the course of the construction he would call and get in the greasy oil and test its fitness. After several weeks of tedious work in getting the coffin to fit his odd customer the cabinetmaker delivered it to Fetter's home, where it has remained in the garage of the house ever since, until the time of the old man's death, when it was brought down, the dust removed from the lid, and the remains of the purchaser placed in it for burial. The coffin was an odd-looking affair.

A WOMAN MISSING.

Mysterious Disappearance of Mrs. Jenkins Near Winchester, Va.
Winchester, Va., Aug. 15.—Mrs. Frank Jenkins, who, with her husband, resides with the family of Mr. George Cunningham near this city, has mysteriously disappeared. She left her home last Monday to visit her cousin, who resides about two miles distant, and in going to the place it was necessary to pass through some woods and cross a stream. She did not return Tuesday, but her husband had no fear, as the streams were greatly swollen by the rains, so he waited her return until Thursday morning, when she did not return. He immediately went in search of her husband, much to his dismay, that she had never reached her cousin's home. The whole community has been hunted over, but no clew has been obtained of her disappearance. It is feared that she was either drowned or some foul play has been worked. Mrs. Jenkins was twenty-eight years of age, and has two small children, aged one and two years.
